Abaigeal Van Deerlin is an associate in the firm's business litigation practice, and has been a litigator for over ten years specializing in complex civil litigation.

Abby applies a broad background in litigation to develop detailed and thoughtful research in nuanced and complex matters. Her experience in breach of contract, mass tort claims, employment matters, and appellate litigation allows her to suggest creative and effective solutions for various litigation matters.

Prior to coming to the firm, Abby worked as Senior Counsel for the New York City Law Department. There she represented a wide array of New York City municipal agencies in complex, high-exposure state and federal tort suits in all stages of litigation, from notice of claim to summary judgment, settlement or trial.
